What's New in the Braille2000?

The new Braille2000 program is the result of more than two years of development. The program was designed from the ground up, making it as simple as a mouse click to send a Braille document to a Braille production center, to a school, to a blind student, or to a fellow transcriber. Braille2000 is fully Internet-aware, making it as simple as a mouse click to send a Braille document to a Braille production center. Because of its design, people who are blind or visually impaired who never used a computer before can use and enjoy using Braille2000 to create their own braille books and send them to friends or even to their local newspaper. Braille2000 is a braille translator and a braille editor that will be the most widely used application in the new millennium. The program can handle a wide variety of print formats, including PDF, PostScript, PS, PCT, ASP, TIFF, EPS, PCT, ABT, and what is by far the most common format used in the world today for XHTML formatted files, HTML files, RTF files, and others. The program will even convert print documents to ABT files. If you send a document to a printer, it will create a PCL file. If you send a document to a Braille production center, it will create a .ABT file. The documents it converts from print to braille XML can be exported in a variety of formats and can be imported into documents of various formats that are commonly used to create braille documents. Braille2000, makes braille files for the browser and for communication.

Braille2000 creates braille documents for people who are blind, or who use a computer with a braille printer or braille display. It can
