To investigate the effects of aortic cross-clamping on water and sodium excretion, unanaesthetized rats were prepared for measurement of total exchangeable sodium (NaT) by means of inulin clearance, and after a 30-min period aortic cross-clamping was instituted. 2. One group was subjected to aortic cross-clamping for 30 min with normovolemia, in the second group aortic cross-clamping was instituted after induction of normal plasma volume expansion with 0.6 ml/100 g body wt of NaCl. In the third group plasma volume expansion was not performed. 3. In the groups with normal volume expansion, aortic cross-clamping resulted in a marked increase in total exchangeable sodium without any increase in total exchangeable water. In the group with volume expansion aortic cross-clamping resulted in a fall in inulin clearance, plasma volume, total exchangeable sodium, total exchangeable potassium, total exchangeable magnesium and a fall in potassium-chloride exchange. 4. These results suggest that the increase in sodium excretion following aortic cross-clamping was due to increased sodium conservation and not to reduced sodium reabsorption.Q: RDA (Regularization Path Algorithm) produces Inf and -Inf in matrix in linear programming I am trying to solve problem LP2 but it is giving Inf and -Inf values in matrix. Q1: Can you tell me why this happens? Q2: Do we need to use a modified version of RDA in order to get a feasible solution? Q3: 1cb139a0ed
